PACKAGED DISASTER HOSPITAL TO ARRIVE

The Medical Service of the Mattapoisett Civil Defense Agency announces that the long awaited 200 bed Packaged Disaster Hospital will arrive on Wednesday, August 31st.

Unloading and storage of the 44,000 pounds and 650 cases of equipment will take place on August 31 and September 1 at the Center School. Sheriff Adnah Harlow of Plymouth County is supplying a working party for the unloading and Mrs. Walter Clark of the Woman's Club is in charge of the checkers. The working party will be fed a noon meal at the Mattapoisett Inn, courtesy of Mr. Lagresse.

The Disaster Hospital can be set up and in operation within four hours and contains enough equipment and supplies to provide medical service to over 2000 patients over a 30-day period without resupply. The Disaster hospital will be assigned to an existing Host Hospital (yet unnamed) in this area. The Host Hospital will assign an operations officer to the Mattapoisett Medical Service staff to assist and advise in the preparation of utilization plans for the unit.

Approximately 350 people are required to operate the hospital on a 24-hour basis. For this reason, it is requested that all townspeople who have any type of medical training or who desire to be of service in any way, please contact the Civil Defense Director, Mr. Loren Mosher, or the Medical Service Administrator, Mr. William MacLean.

The addition of this facility will contribute greatly to the emergency readiness of not only Mattapoisett, but also the surrounding towns, the State and the Nation.

INTERNATIONALLY FAMOUS "BELDY" TO EXHIBIT IN MARION

A spry, little British lady, who calls herself "Beldy" has created a new medium in art. She lives and works in a small studio near London surrounded by neatly stacked boxes of scraps of material ranging from gauze to burlap. These are her palette of colors. She produces "paintings" by juxtaposing and superimposing bits and pieces of cloth. Beldy moves the little carefully chosen swatches here and there so that they convey an illusion of depth, atmosphere and astonishing animation in so unwieldy a medium.

Unlike collage, Beldy's creations are not held together by glue but rather by the thinnest nylon threads stitched on to the cardboard backing of the picture. No paint is ever spread across the top, although the final effect is one of a vibrant poem of color and texture. Beldy's genius far surpasses the art of needlework, yet there is no name for her medium as yet. It is not important how the pictures are made. The beauty and vitality that this elderly lady is able to see and to convey to the viewer is fantastic.

Everything inspires Beldy: the ballet, street scenes, Biblical themes, people and candid glimpses of genre. Always with a sketchpad, this artist has traveled widely and works feverishly, sometimes 24 hours at a time. The results of her career may be seen at the Marion Art Center beginning August 28th.

Mrs. Mabel Maugham, Beldy's real name, began studying water color at a very young age. She is the sister-in-law of W. Somerset Maugham and was a contemporary of Whistler who once complimented her on her gifted technique in watercolor, a rare thing for this sardonic man. Beldy's first one-man show was in 1929 at La Maison des Artistas in Paris. Since then she has had more than forty exhibits in London, Paris, Milan, Geneva, Rome, New York and in Boston at the Copley Society Gallery, Botolph Gallery, Wenham Historical Museum and others. Her popularity is evidenced by the large following who come to see her works again and again at the different Museums and galleries. Many of Beldy's creations are in private collections in and around Boston. All in the Marion exhibition are for sale except one on loan from Mrs. John Bullard of New Bedford.

This is a rare opportunity for art appreciators of this area, for Beldy's work is now avidly sought by collectors and museums. The Cecil Clark Davis Gallery of the Marion Art Center is privileged to display the unique collection of this internationally famous artist. To view an innovation in art, to see the work of a gifted and vital 92 year old lady, and to experience the wonder and beauty in life as she sees it

CADETTE TROOP IN MATT.

Plans for a Cadette Troop of Girl Scouts in Mattapoisett for seventh grade girls are being made by Mrs. John Drury, leader, assisted by Mrs. William Croft and Mrs. Melvin Miller. A full and interesting program will be offered, including camping experience. Registration is scheduled to take place at Old Rochester Regional High School on Wednesday, September 21st after school, at which time the program for the year will be discussed. Meetings will be held on Wednesday afternoons throughout the year. The troop is open to all seventh grade girls of Mattapoisett whether or not they have had previous Scouting experience.

A number of eighth and ninth grade girls have expressed an interest in continuing in Scouting but there are, at present, no leaders available for this group. Five adults are required for each troop in order to register the troop. Training for leaders and troop committee members to assist the leaders will be available during September, dates to be announced, at the Congregational Church. Any adult who can set aside even a limited amount of time, or who has a special talent to share, is asked to call Mrs. George Silsby, neighborhood chairman, as soon as possible, in order that a program

A Farm Boy's Memories of 100 Years Ago XII

One of the worst experiences Father ever had in collecting livestock for his Uncle Ed Hammond's slaughtering business was the Saturday afternoon he had to drive a pig from East Mattapoisett back to the farm at the head of the Neck Road. Father hated the thought of doing this; he dreaded it, he pleaded. He knew how impossible it is to make a pig go anywhere but six directions you don't want it to go. He also had unhappy visions of driving that pig through the center of the village. Neither County Street nor Church Street extension had been built. There was no way to by-pass the town. He must come down Cannonville Hill and right through the center.

But his Uncle Ed was driving the animal wagon to Rochester himself that afternoon, so Father had to get the pig on foot. He got himself a stout stick, walked the mile to town, wound through the village, and trudged two miles beyond, up and over Hammond's Hill to a farm at the top of Macomber's Hill, where dwelt the pig.

As the hog was large and Father couldn't have been more than eleven years old, the next few hours were some of the most miserable spent in his long life. In the first place, the pig developed a strong attachment to its native farmyard and showed no intention of going anywhere else. It took the combined efforts of Father and the farmer, belaboring the animal with their sticks, to drive him out of the yard and along the road, squealing his head off. In fact, he squealed the whole trip.

In the second place, the hog, like most, acted like a lunatic. He rarely trotted or walked in any one direction for long, but dashed madly from one side of the road to the other, heading for every gateway into field or farm.

A pig, though quite large, can run surprisingly fast, so Father was constantly racing after him to turn him round, and then racing to get in front of him to prevent him from sprinting back to where he started from. To help matters, dogs appeared from every other farmyard, barking wildly and chasing the hog until the poor animal was a hulk of squealing panic. This running, shouting, racing, barking, and squealing went on all the way down Hammond's Hill, past Bolles Corner and beyond, until they reached the head of Ship Street where the road turns to the right towards Cannonville Hill.

Here the pig darted left down the Ned's Point Road. Father overtook him and turned him back. At the intersection, the pig headed back for Bolles Corner, and Father had to race to turn him again. This time the pig went straight ahead down Ship Street hill. Here Father had a chance to slow down and catch his breath, for at the bottom there were only two choices--to the right on Shipyard Lane, the correct move, or straight ahead into the harbor. The pig ran straight for the harbor.

Father started on the run again, and after chasing the hog back and forth a few times in the beach sand, finally got him headed up Ship Street. Naturally he tried to keep going to the top again, but by this time a couple of boys had been attracted to the fun and with these new recruits the squealer was turned down Shipyard Lane and driven without too much exertion onto Water Street.

Here a new crisis broke. A large two-horse team accompanied by a dog, coming from the village, temporarily blocked the street, and the pig darted abruptly back up Cannonville Hill. The boys took after him, and after a hectic five minutes of chasing him back and forth across the road, joined by the excited dog, scaring the horses, and incurring curses by the driver, they succeeded in getting the pig past the wagon and headed for the village.

A relative lull followed. The pig was tired and trotted along in a fairly regular course. That is, until he reached the Center along the waterfront--say about Mechanic Street. Then the farm animal was confronted with mass confusion--horses, carriages, wagons; men, women, boys and dogs. The next half-hour was a nightmare for the eleven year old boy. The pig, goaded by Father's stick and the boy's cries, darted wildly back and forth across the street, up on the sidewalks, along the store fronts, between wagons, among groups of people. Dogs barked, boys shouted, women screamed, men swore. Father and the boys chased the pig, headed him off, turned him back, chased him on. The pain in Father's side from running was so intense he could hardly gasp.

At last the hog dashed up Cannon Street only to dart into people's yards, from whence he had to be chased out again amidst the angry shouts of house dwellers. Finally, after what seemed forever, the pig was driven down Church Street, up Main Street and along the last mile to the Herring Weir with a minimum of sorties, for the animal was worn out. In fact, it was sometimes a question of getting him to move at all.

When Father finally drove the pig into the farmyard at the head of the Neck Road, his Uncle Ed was at first inclined to be angry at the animal's condition and at the length of time the trip had taken; but he--and Father's mother --soon saw the boy's complete exhaustion and listened to his tearful, almost hysterical, tale of frustration and humiliation. He was given a hot bath in the wooden tub in the middle of the kitchen floor, given a hot supper, and put to bed--asleep almost before his mother covered him up.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

My neighbors and I are more than a little concerned by the vague collection times for garbage and rubbish. The townspeople are asked to cooperate by keeping paper out of the garbage and garbage out of the rubbish, etc., but we can never be certain when either will be collected. We're proud of our town and the appearance of our neighborhood as I'm sure other townspeople are. Sometimes we have rubbish at the curb from Wednesday night until sometime Friday awaiting collection. Obviously this does not enhance the appearance of Church Street. Strong winds and stray animals can worsen this appearance by scattering rubbish if it is not tightly covered.

The garbage, I understand, is to be collected twice a week during the summer months. When I asked the garbage man what days he collected in our neighborhood, I was told Monday or Tuesday, and Thursday or Friday. Last week we had a collection on Tuesday and the next collection was the following Monday. We are asked not to put disinfectants and strong detergents in our garbage cans but how can we cope with maggots and crawling things with a haphazard collection schedule? Can something be done to improve these?

ATTENDED MEETING FOR KEITH

Mrs. Edna L. Borden and Mrs. Ada B. Cowing, both former vice-chairmen of the Marion Republican Town Committee, now Wareham residents, attended a meeting of long time supporters of Congressman Hastings Keith at his beautiful home in West Bridgewater.

A delicious chowder and apple pie supper was served to about 75 guests on the spacious lawn. Mrs. Keith is a charming hostess and looks too young to have a daughter being married next month.

Congressman Keith told the gathering about the many problems needing solutions in the Capitol, and introduced his staff.

Statistics were discussed regarding places showing party weakness. Several candidates spoke briefly.

THANK YOU - We wish to thank our many friends who sent such beautiful cards to us on our Golden Anniversary. Mr. & Mrs. N. Floyd Tinkham.

HELP BUILD THE NEW CARRIAGE SHED

HISTORICAL SOCIETY LAUNCHES FUND RAISING DRIVE

Following its most successful Old Glass Exhibit, which attracted over 600 visitors, the Mattapoisett Historical Society is launching an all-out fund raising drive to build its Carriage Shed Museum to house antique farming and highway equipment and tools. Last year's drive came within $900.00 of its goal of $5,000 which added to the $5,000. already had, placed the fund within striking distance of the estimated $10,000. needed.

But, over the winter, prices rose so fast that an additional $4,000. is now needed to meet the lowest bid. The executive board has decided that the only way to get the building built is to let the contract at once at today's prices, raise as much money as possible immediately, borrow the rest and repay it with today's dollars instead of the inflated dollars of the future.

Letters of appeal have been sent out to prospective donors, and a special meeting of the entire membership was called for Tuesday night, August 23rd, to authorize borrowing the necessary funds.
